MUSIC & LITURGY NOTES: WORSHIPPING WELL (PART 2)

In worshipping well, it is essential that we are well prepared. Reflecting on this week's column, I got caught up thinking of all the persons of my generation, including many of my friends, who do not practice their faith. Some of these individuals might still label themselves by a religious denomination, while others use the nebulous and equivocal term, "spiritual" to describe their faith. We see mainstream churches doing all that they can to tailor aspects of music, media, and even lighting effects to attract this age demographic back into the pews, but these efforts usually do not garner impressive results. Before I sway too far off topic, my point in bringing this up is that ironically, when it comes time for Lent, these very people who do not practice their faith are the first to declare what they are giving up for Lent in addition to making known that they abstain from eating meat on Fridays. Ironically, although the practice of their faith might be lost, the cultural structures that they connected to as children still remain firmly in place.

What are you "giving up" this Lent? While chocolate, sweets, and television might be at the top of all of our lists, what about time? The three readings and psalm that we hear each weekend at Mass were carefully selected by the Church and have a common theme or two woven among them. Sometimes the themes are apparent, while other times less so. Why not give up one half hour each week this Lent to read through and reflect on the scripture readings before hearing them in church. This preparation will offer you a deeper sense of meaning during the actual liturgy, and the priest's sermon may resonate deeper with you, as well. We should all strive to leave church with the message of the scriptures still clear in our mind. And, of course, if you have any questions about what it is that you are reading, a priest or deacon would be happy to help you. We publish the upcoming scripture citations in our bulletin, but you can also find the readings at www.usccb.org.

So, why haven't I left the Church? Music has always kept me closely associated with my faith. If my home parish did not have a children's choir, I would probably not be with you on Sundays. Music was the vehicle that has helped me to greater understand the bedrocks of Word and Eucharist that make up our weekly celebration. It is the passion that drives me to share its effect with you. For what are others searching? Everyone is different, but a large component is community. In the Gospel of Matthew, we hear Jesus say, "for where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." The more we have to offer our youngest parishioners, the more connected they will feel in their community. As our children grow up, we need to show them that the Church's liturgy is community. Let us lead by example and show our full presence in both the scripture and the Eucharist.

1917-1918 ADMISSIONS INFORMATION

Monday, January 30, was a spirited day full of new families, current families, and excited students ready to celebrate Catholic School's Week and our Winter Open House. St. Jane de Chantal was able to show all the reasons our community loves being a part of such an incredible school! After such an excellent turn-out, spaces are limited; call the school today to secure a tour. Our school is accepting applications in grades Pre-K to Grade 7 for the 2017-18 school year; application deadline is March 1. Contact the school office (301-530-1221) for additional information.

MUSIC MINISTRY NEWS

On Saturday, February 4, youth of our parish participated in the Pedals, Pipes, and Pizza program. The day included breakfast, a kid-focused movie about the building of an organ, a demonstration of our church's pipe organ, show and tell of various shapes and sizes of organ pipes, a walk-through the inside of our pipe organ's forest of over 2,000 pipes, and a pizza lunch. Support of programs such as this is generously provided by our Friends of Music benefactors.

ANNUAL SPELLING BEE

St. Jane de Chantal students in grades three through eight competed at the school level of the Scripps National Spelling Bee. After many elimination rounds, Isabella Totia was declared the winner when she correctly spelled the championship word, "aardvark." Emily Blackstone was runner-up. Isabella now advances to the regional level bee.

GEOGRAPHY BEE

This year, St. Jane de Chantal welcomed the first annual Geography Bee for students in fourth through eighth grades. After many difficult questions involving international geography facts and a hushed crowd awaiting a champion, the first annual St. Jane de Chantal Geography Bee title went to eighth grader, Timothy Shaheen; runner-up was fourth grader, John Broome. Timothy Shaheen will move up to the next round.
